Patient Stories

Juan M

Juan M, a Spanish-speaking Lawful Permanent Resident, sustained brain injuries when he was the victim of an attempted murder. His application to be exempted for medical reasons from the civics exam for his naturalization was denied. The LegalHealth attorney resubmitted the application and attended the client's interview with him where she argued that his brain injuries prevent him from learning. USCIS approved the waiver and Juan was subsequently sworn in as a US citizen. His LegalHealth attorney also assisted him in applying for Supplemental Security Income and Juan is now receiving $785 in monthly benefits.

Ms. A

Ms. A is a 79-year-old woman with two adult children, both of whom have severe mental/physical disabilities. She was referred to LegalHealth when their Public Assistance was cut off. LegalHealth appealed the discontinuance and successfully represented the client at the hearing. Her PA was reinstated and she received a retroactive award of benefits. LegalHealth is also pursuing whether the client is entitled to receive a pension she paid into Jamaica now that she is living in the US. Lastly, LegalHealth is helping the client with advance planning for her two disabled adult children.
